CRANSTOUN OF COREHOUSE'S PAMPHLETS

1) A FREEHOLDER OF THE COUNTY OF ROSS. A short address to the gentlemen of the northern counties, on the prohibition of distillation from grain. Edinburgh. Printed for Bell & Bradfute, 1810. First edition.

8vo. [4], 27, [1], 13pp, [1]. With a half-title.

[Bound with:] A view of the state of parties in the united states of america; being an attempt to account for the present ascendancy of the french, or democratic party, in that country; in two letters to a friend. By a gentleman who has recently visited the united states. Edinburgh. Printed by James Ballantyne and Co. for John Ballantyne and Co., 1812. First edition. 110pp.

[And:] Letters, by anglicus, addressed to The Editor of the Chelmsford Chronicle, concerning reform in parliament... Chelmsford. Printed for the author, by Meggy and Chalk, 1811. First edition. xii, 56pp.

[And:] HAWLES, Sir John. The englishman's right: a dialogue between a barrister at law and a jurymen... London. Re-printed...for T. C. Hansard, 1811. [4], 42pp.

[And:] A plain statement of the conduct of the ministry and the opposition, towards his royal highness the duke of york. London. Printed by B. McMillan, 1808. Second edition. [2], 53pp, [1].

[And:] Trial. The king, on the prosecution of gwyllym lloyd wardle, esq. m.p. against francis wright, daniel wright, and mary anne clarke, for A Conspiracy... London. Printed by W. Flint, 1809. First edition. [2], 60pp.

[And:] Debates on the convention act in the irish house of commons in 1793... London. Printed for J. Budd, 1811. [4], 63pp, [1]. With a half-title.

[And:] The speech of Wm. frankland, Esq. in the House of Commons...on the second reading of several bills, brought in by sir samuel romilly, for making alterations in the criminal law. London. Printed for J. Ridgway, 1811. vii, [1], 80pp.

8vo. Contemporary gilt-ruled half-calf, marbled boards. Without lettering-piece. Rubbed. Scattered spotting. Six pamphlets with the contemporary inked ownership inscriptions of Rob MacLeod to half-titles/titles. From the recently dispersed library (by descent) of George Cranstoun, Lord Corehouse (1770-1850), Scottish jurist, satirist and friend of Walter Scott and Lord Monboddo, with his armorial bookplate to FEP.

A sammelband of eight early nineteenth-century pamphlets relating to the governments of Scotland, England, and the United States.

The first mentioned work, by an anonymous 'Freeholder of the County of Ross', vehemently criticises the introduction of an 1808 Act which temporarily prohibited the distillation of sugar from corn, arguing the government's claims for introducing the measure, notably alleged scarcity of grain and the need to support West Indian merchants, are wholly unfounded.

The second mentioned pamphlet surveys the political tensions between the Federalists and Democrats, and between France, England and the United States, which culminated in the War of 1812. The Edinburgh Monthly Magazine (Vol. I, 1817, p.414-415) attributes the work to Samuel McCormack.

SECURITY AGAINST DROWNING

- 5) [ANECDOTES]. The anecdote-book: a choice collection of anecdotes, jests, witty sayings, bon mots, &c., &c. Selected from the best sources. Glasgow. Printed for the booksellers, 1856.

12mo. 24pp. Woodcut on title page. Title within ornamental border. Six bifolia, unopened at head, as issued. A trifle creased and dusty.

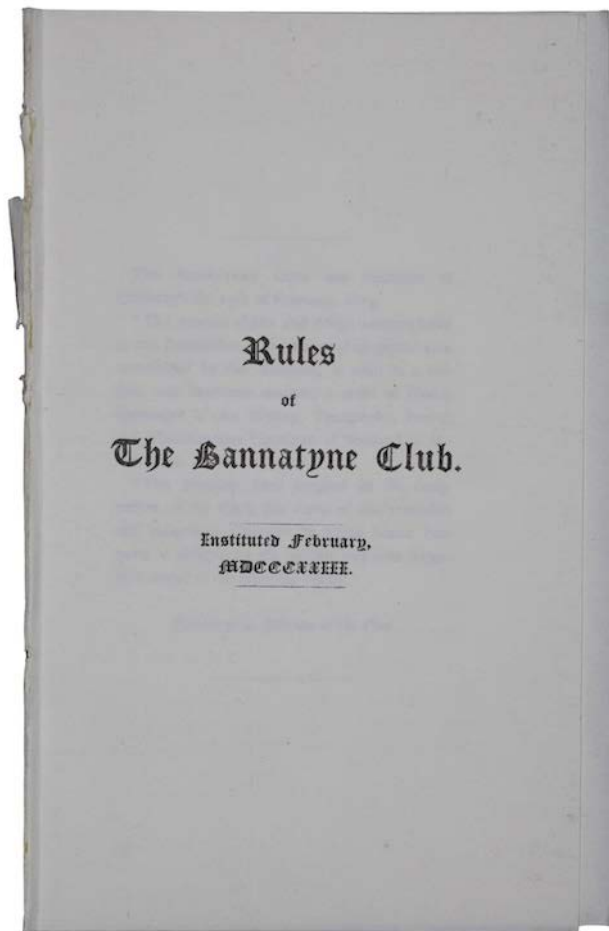

A Glaswegian chapbook collection of succinct anecdotes on a remarkably diverse range of subjects, from 'gipsy wit' to 'security against drowning'. Though often containing a modicum of useful wisdom, some of the selections are designed merely to entertain, for example under the heading 'Very Funny', one finds the following quip: 'Father do they light up railway carriages at night with gas?' 'No, my dear, with train oil.' Presumably one had to be there.

This edition, one of several appearing at Glasgow and Alnwick in the mid-nineteenth century, appears unrecorded by OCLC or COPAC.

12) [BANNATYNE CLUB]. Notices relative to the bannatyne club...including critiques on some of its publications.

Edinburgh. Printed for private circulation, 1836. First edition.

Quarto. One of 50 copies printed. [2], xviii, 277pp, [1]. Partially interleaved. With an engraved frontispiece, a further four plates, and a list of subscribers. Later blue buckram, lettered in gilt to spine. A trifle rubbed. Book-label of J. L. Weir to FEP, later newspaper clippings relating to the death of David Laing to rear endpapers.

The first edition of a collection of papers relative to the Bannatyne Club and its publications. This, partially interleaved, copy includes the addition of two contemporary presentation inscriptions: 'For the Right Honourable / Sir James Mackintosh / from his affectionate friend / Tho. Thomson / Charlotte Square / Edin. Jan 28. 1830', and 'To T. G. Wright Esq. / With my affectionate regards / J. Nairne / 24th Sept. 1830'.

The first is in the hand of record scholar and advocate Thomas Thomson (1768-1852), a prolific editor for, and sometime vice-president of the Bannatyne Club, with whom he issued fourteen historical texts, including The History and Life of James the Sext (1825).

CAPTAIN WEDDERBURN'S COURTSHIP.

The Lord of Hallow's daughter
Walk'd thro' the woods her lane,
And lye came Captain Wedderburn,
A servant to the king:
He said unto his servant man,
Were it not against the law,
I would take her to my own bed,
And lay her next the wa'.

I'm walking here alone she says,
Among my father's trees;
And you may let me walk alone,
Kind Sir, now if you please:
The supper-bell it will be rung,
And I'll be miss'd, you know;
So I will not lie in your bed,
Neither at stock nor wa'.

He says, My pretty lady,
I pray lend me your hand;
And you'll have drums and trumpets,
Always at your command;
And fifty men to guard you,
Who well their swords can draw:
And we'll both lie in a bed,
And thou'll be next the wa'.

O hold away from me, kind Sir,
I pray let go my hand;

The supper-bell it will be rung,
No longer must I stand;
My father he'll no supper take,
If I be miss'd, you know:
So I'll not lie in your bed,
Neither at stock nor wa'.

Then says the pretty lady,
I pray tell me your name:
My name is Captain Wedderburn,
A servant to the king:
Thou' thy father and his men were here,
Of them I'd have no awe;
But would take thee into my bed,
And lay thee next the wa'.

He lighted off his milk-white steed,
And set this lady on,
And held her by the milk-white hand,
Even as they rode along:
He held her by the middle jimp,
For fear that she should fall;
And said, I'll take thee to my bed,
And lay thee next the wa'.

He took her to his lodging-house,
His landlady look'd ben,
Says, Many ladies in Edinburgh I've seen,
But never such a one.

For such a pretty face as this,
In it I never saw;

AN ENGLISH ORDER BOOK DURING THE '45

15) [BRITISH ARMY]. [A Victorian manuscript copy of the general orders of several British Regiments during campaigns in Scotland 1745-46].
 [s.i.]. [s.n.], [s.d., c. 1875].

Oblong 8vo. Manuscript on paper. [98] leaves. Paper watermarked 1875. Contemporary red half-morocco, red buckram boards, ruled and lettered in gilt. Rubbed and marked. Marbled endpapers, hinges exposed, typed bookseller's description pasted to verso of FFEP, first leaf detached.

A Victorian manuscript copy, in at least two unidentified hands, of the general military order for several British Regiments during the campaign in Scotland 1745-46, including (according to a later manuscript note to verso of FFEP) those of Lieutenant Archibald Campbell of the 3rd Regiment of Dragoons who was aide-de-camp to General Bland and served under 'Butcher' Cumberland at the Battle of Culloden.

Campbell's military order books have seemingly never been published; the originals are preserved at the National Army Museum (NAM 1968-07-228).

- 17) [CAMERON, George]. A history and description of the town of Inverness; its principal buildings, public institutions etc. With a guide to the various objects of interest in its neighbourhood; also, a statistical sketch of the county of Inverness.

Inverness. Kenneth Douglas, James Smith, and Donald Fraser, 1847. First edition.

8vo. 160pp. With a half-title. Original publisher's blind-stamped green cloth, lettered in gilt to upper board. Lightly rubbed and marked, spine dulled. Internally clean and crisp.

The first edition – in original state - of a succinct history of, and guide to, Inverness.

The latter half of the text, devoted to the primary structures of the Highland city, includes a brief notice on local libraries: 'The principal Circulating Library is kept by Mr Douglas, and consists of upwards of 6000 volumes', and a passage on municipal printers: 'Inverness possesses several excellent printing offices. The principal are the newspaper offices; but there are others which, although they do not command such a variety of types, are, notwithstanding, good jobbing offices. Much inconvenience has occasionally been felt for the want of a copperplate and lithographic press in the town. Work of this description has to be sent to Glasgow, Edinburgh, or Aberdeen'.

21) [CORBET, John]. The epistle congratatorie of Lysimachus Nicanor Of the Societie of Jesu, to the covenanters in scotland. Wherein is paralleled our sweet Harmony and correspondency in divers materiall points of Doctrine and Practice.

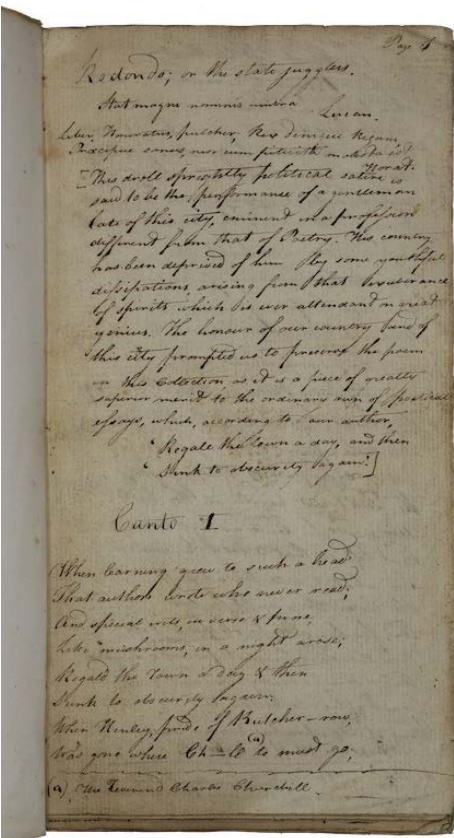

[London]. [Printed by Robert Young and Richard Badger], 1640. First edition.

Quarto. [2], 78pp. Title in red and black. In this edition E3r line 2 has: lawes. Recent calf-backed marbled paper boards. Lightly rubbed. Leaves browned, early manuscript note to title page.

The first edition of religious polemicist and Church of Scotland and Church of Ireland minister John Corbet's (1603-1641) controversially bitter attack of Scotch Presbyterians. Corbet upbraids the covenanters and uses the character of a fictional Jesuit to express satisfaction at the contemporary troubles in Scotland, and on sixteen separate counts, to draw close parallels between the pretended doctrines of the Presbyterians and the Society of Jesus.

22) DALRYMPLE. Hugh. Rodondo, or, the State Jugglers.

8vo. Manuscript on paper. 58pp followed by three further manuscript poems 'On the New Front of Drury Lane Theatre', Gay's Epitaph by Pope', and 'Horace, Book I, Ode 22 parodied'. Later two-tone paper boards, title in manuscript to upper board. Extremities rubbed. Internally clean and crisp.

An early manuscript copy of Hugh Dalrymple's (d. 1774) political burlesque. Rodondo is a witty commentary on society and a defence of Scotland during the Bute administration published serially in the Scots Magazine and then in book form from 1763. This manuscript comprises Cantos I & II and incorporates footnotes, not in the published first edition, which clarify the identities of persons alluded to in the poem, including Charles Churchill and William Pitt.

The three additional short poems at the end of the volume all appeared in printed form in the September 1775 issue of the Scots Magazine, suggesting that to be the earliest probable date for the composition of the manuscript.

24) [EDINBURGH DIARIST]. [The manuscript diary of a female Edinburgh resident in the early twentieth century].

Quarto. Manuscript on paper. [89] leaves. Contemporary gilt-ruled limp red morocco, marbled edges, paper label, with date in manuscript to upper board. Lightly rubbed. Marbled endpapers, internally clean and crisp. Four photographic illustrations, seemingly excised from contemporary guide books/periodicals pasted-in.

The manuscript diary of Betty Angus of 5 Chester Street, Edinburgh, commencing on Saturday 16th July, 1904, and concluding on Saturday 31st December. A devoted church goer, and apparently devoutly pious woman, Betty's life is quiet and rather idyllic, her time devoted primarily to reading (with purchases made at Douglas and Foulis) and playing bridge.

A notable exception to her unassuming routine is a cycling trip taken to Inverness in August, during which she ventures to Culloden Moor to visit the Cumberland Stone and the graves of the who fought at the Battle of Culloden, which with characteristic quietude our diarist simply records as 'very interesting indeed'.

26) [EDINBURGH UNIVERSITY]. [Manuscript notes on medical lectures taken at the University of Edinburgh]. [Edinburgh]. [s.n.], [1873-74].

8vo. Manuscript on paper. 18 volumes: Pathology (Vols. I-IV), Materia Medica (Vols. I-II), Midwifery (Vols. I-IV), Surgery (Vols I, II, and V only), Clinical Surgery (Vols. I-II), Practice of Physic (one volume), Diseases of Women (one volume), and Demonstrations in Anatomy (one volume). Uniformly bound in contemporary black glazed cloth, paper labels, with titles in manuscript, to the majority of upper boards, manuscript titles to all fore-edges bar one. Extremities rubbed, glazing now crazed with loss to surface. Internally clean and crisp.

An extensive collection of manuscript notes taken at medical lectures at the University of Edinburgh between 1873 and 1874. At the front of each volume the subject of the lecture and the name of the lecturer is provided, these include, but are not limited to:

William Rutherford Sanders (1828-1881), pathologist at Edinburgh Royal Infirmary from 1852, known as one of the first physicians to recommend digitalis to alleviate heart conditions.

A rare opportunity to acquire a detailed repository of information documenting the theory and practice of medicine as it was studied in Victorian Edinburgh.

Sir Alexander Russell Simpson (1835-1916), Professor of Midwifery. Sir Alexander's famous contribution to the field are the obstetrics forceps, which reduce pain for the mother during childbirth and aid delivery.

Sir William Turner (1832-1916), Professor of Anatomy who spent the twilight of his career as the Principal of the University of Edinburgh. He was the author of the influential Atlas of Human Anatomy and Physiology (1857).

Sir Robert Christison (1797-1882), physician specialising in toxicology, and the first person to describe renal anaemia. In 1848, he was appointed physician to Queen Victoria, who awarded him a baronetcy in 1871 for his dedication.

Thomas Annandale (1838-1907), surgeon who served as Regius Professor of Clinical Surgery at the University. Among his professional achievements, Annandale developed a novel approach for inguinal hernia repair, performed the first repair of the meniscus, and conducted the first extraction of an acoustic neuroma.

28) [ERSKINE, John]. [An apparently eighteenth-century manuscript transcription of the journal of John Erskine of Carnock for the period between 1683 and 1685].

Oblong 8vo. Manuscript on paper. [107]ff. Closely written on both rectos and versos. Contemporary half-calf, marbled boards. Rubbed, upper joint split. Internally clean and crisp.

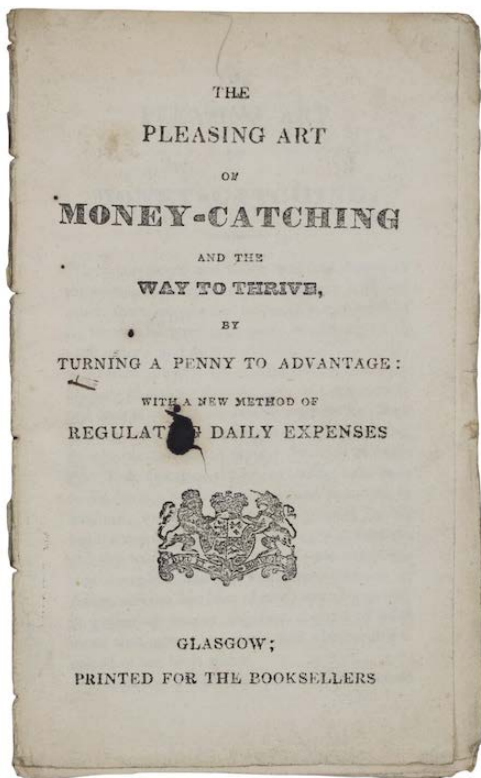

An undated, although apparently eighteenth-century transcription, in a single legible hand, of the journal of John Erskine of Carnock (1662-1743) for the period between 5th June, 1683 and 26th May, 1685. Not published until the Scottish History Society edition of 1893, the journal gives a detailed account of the period between the Restoration and the Revolution. As an aspirant to the Bar, Erskine attended the courts where those apprehended in the aftermath of the Battle of Bothwell Bridge were tried and sentenced to death or banishment. Typical of such entries is this from 1684: '25th Jul last. Mr. Will Spens sometimes Argyles Secretary was put in the boots & received many strokes till his leg was crushed...having yet discovered nothing he was taken...to the Canongate...& set upon a form where he had nothing to lean on, the soldiers being commanded to keep him from sleep which they did till Saturday the 2nd August'. In addition, numerous references are made to the transportation of prisoners to North America, specifically Carolina.

Erskine's Presbyterian sympathies led him to join with the army of William of Orange, where he was given command of a Regiment of Foot, participating in the invasion that commenced the Glorious Revolution of 1688. In return for his service, he was given further commands in William's army and, in 1695, he was appointed a director of the newly founded Company of Scotland Trading to Africa and the Indies. He was the father of noted advocate and jurist John Erskine (1695-1768), author of Principles of the law of Scotland (1745).

The causes of Men wanting Money.

Since money is a thing so necessary and so useful, and the want of a competency of it, makes a man so very miserable, rendering him liable to all the scorn and contempt that an ill-natured world can throw upon him; it seems strange so many should want it, especially those that know the worth of it. And therefore it may be worth our enquiring into the causes from whence this want proceeds: I mean the common and ordinary causes; for there are some causes that are extraordinary, such as all our wit and prudence can neither foresee nor avoid. Such was that extraordinary and surprising storm in November 1703, whereby many thousands were undone, as to their estates, besides the many lives that were lost; and such also was the dreadful fire in London, whereby some that had great estates the one week, had scarce bread to eat the next: and in the time of war many are unavoidably losers. But these must not be reckoned the common and ordinary ways that make and keep men poor. We know indeed, that by the divine providence, in the body of a common-wealth there must be both poor and rich, even as an human body cannot subsist without hands and feet to labour, and walk about to provide for the other members; so the rich being the belly, which devour all, yet do no part of the work; but the cause of every man's poverty is not one and the same; some are poor by condition and content with their calling, and neither seek nor can work themselves into better condition; yet God raised up, as by a miracle, the children and posterity of these, oftentimes, to possess the most eminent places either in church or common-wealth, as to become Archbishops, Bishops, Judges, Commanders-general in the field, Secretaries of State, Statesmen, and the like; so that it proveth not always true which the poet says,

If poor thou art, then poor thou shalt remain;
Rich men alone do now rich gifts obtain
Of this condition are the greatest number in every kingdom; others there are, who have possessed great estates, but these estates have not thriven

31) [GHOST STORY]. The ghost of my uncle. To which is added, the outwitted tax-gatherer.

12mo. 24pp. Woodcut on title page. Title within ornamental border. Six loose bifolia, as issued. A trifle creased.

A Glasgow printed chapbook comprised of three short stories. The first is a supernatural tale, with decidedly Gothic overtones, in which, the night following the death of his uncle, a young man is disgusted to find his relatives mocking the character of the deceased. The rowdy party is duly visited by an apparition who chastises them for their behaviour, driving them from the premises. The young man is then shocked when confronted by the figure of his uncle, seemingly returned from the grave. He is soon disabused of his spectral supposition upon discovering that his uncle had been alive and well the entire time, the ghostly goings on merely a ruse to ascertain which of members of his family deserved to inherit his property.

The second story, set on an islet in the midst of Strangford Lough, Ireland, concerns the failed attempt of taxman to collect a considerable sum from the sole resident, a wily old dealer in rabbit skins.

The final tale, 'Scarlet Discovered', is an amusing comedy of manners in which a Highlander outwits a Perth haberdasher who jeeringly mocks his intelligence, a broken bloodily nose his reward.

A mid-eighteenth-century chapbook edition of the life, and ultimate execution, of thief and murderer David Haggart (1801-1821). On the bankruptcy of the firm of millwright for which he worked, Haggart turned to petty theft, becoming a regular pickpocket at fairs and racecourses around Kendal, Carlisle, and Newcastle, and sometimes as far north as Aberdeen. He was apprehended and imprisoned on six occasions, in four instances managing to escape from gaol. On 10th of October 1820, in escaping from Dumfries tolbooth, Haggart felled one of the guards with a stone, killing him. He remained on the run for several months before being re-arrested in March 1821. He was tried on the 11th of June found guilty of murder. A few days later he was hanged. While in gaol he partly wrote and partly dictated an account of his life and crimes, entitled Life of David Haggart, which was to be published after his death by George Robertson. The present chapbook appears to be a heavily reworked abridgement of the book, omitting the Scottish thieves' cant of the original.

looked again, and found the infant dressed in the finest linens and laces: she then kissed it, and shed a torrent of tears, not knowing how to part with her treasure.

At this moment in came the little mouse, and jumped into the basket. "Ah! little creature," said the queen, "how much it costs me to save your life! I shall perhaps lose my dear Juliet. Any other than me would have killed you for the dainty old woman; but I could not consent to it." "You will not repent it, madam," replied the mouse; "I am not so unworthy of your friendship as you suppose." The queen was like one thunder-struck, when she perceived its little visage change to that of a woman, and the paws become hands and feet. At length the queen, hardly daring to look up, discovered the figure to be the fairy that had visited her before, and who had promised to put an end to her misfortunes and sufferings. "I wished to try the goodness of your heart," said the fairy; "I know now that you are virtuous

At these words the queen braced herself, then she kissed the vermilion mouth of the infant. "My pretty little girl, you shall be richer than your father; you shall be a hundred years without illness," said the fairy. "The enraptured queen thanked, and begged that the fairy would take Juliet away, and be careful of her at the same time, "I give her to your daughter."

The fairy accepted the offer, and she then put the little mouse in the basket, which she let down to the tower, and having again taken

FIFE SUBSCRIPTION LIBRARY

44) [LOCKHART, John Gibson]. Peter's letters to his kinsfolk. Edinburgh. Printed for William Blackwood, 1819. Second edition [i.e. first edition].

8vo. In three volumes. xv, [2], vi-viii, 333, [1]; viii, 363, [1]; ix, [3], 351, [1], 24pp. With half-titles, an engraved portrait frontispiece to Vol. I, a further 13 engraved portrait plates, and four vignettes. Contemporary gilt-ruled sprinkled calf, black morocco lettering-pieces. Rubbed and marked. Scattered spotting. Bookseller's tickets of J. Robertson & Co. of Edinburgh to all FEPs, labels of the Colinsburgh subscription library to all FEPs, those to Vols. II and II effaced.

The first edition of writer and literary editor John Gibson Lockhart's (1794-1854) remarkably popular triple-decker epistolary fiction satirising prominent Scotsmen of the age, issued under the pseudonym of itinerant Welshman Peter Morris M.D. Despite the title page statement, this is the first edition and not the second - a deliberate obfuscation, designed to compliment the satirical nature of the work and obscure the author's identity. This act of misdirection was further galvanised by Lockhart's anonymous review of the fabricated 'first edition' in Blackwood's Magazine prior to publication.

The subscription library at Colinsburgh, Fife, survived until at least 1860 (Slater's Royal National Commercial Directory and Topography of Scotland).

Inverness. Hugh Mackenzie, [1876].

8vo. In two volumes. xl, 393, [1]; [6], 440pp. With a lithographed colour frontispiece to each volume, five further lithographed plates, and numerous engraved illustrations in the text. Partially unopened in original publisher's green cloth, printed paper lettering-pieces to spines. A trifle rubbed, lettering-pieces browned and chipped, upper board of Vol. I stained. Tickets of Glasgow-based bookseller Hugh Hopkins to both FEPs, endpapers browned, offsetting to titles, very occasional light spotting.

A reissue, with a memoir of the author, of James Logan's (1797-1872) most significant work. First published in London in 1831, the book, dedicated to William IV, encompasses a broad spectrum of topics, from archaeology to early nineteenth-century Gaelic literature, including chapters on arms, dress, hunting, food, and poetry and music. The majority of its archaeological and historical conclusions are, by contemporary standards spurious, too reliant on the Ossianica of James Macpherson. The work does however contain much of value regarding traditional highland lore and the Gaelic language.

WITCHCRAFT AND MURDER

48) MACKENZIE, George. The laws and customes of scotland, In Matters criminal. Wherein is to be seen how the Civil Law, and the Laws and Customs of other Nations do agree with, and supply ours. Edinburgh. Printed by Thomas Brown, 1678. First edition.

Quarto. [16], 272, 271-581pp, [1]. With initial order-to-print leaf. Title in red and black. Recent red morocco-backed red pebbled cloth boards, tooled and lettered in gilt, all edges red. Lightly rubbed and marked. Book-label of Lord Aitchison to FEP, scattered spotting, occasional early manuscript notes.

Sir George Mackenzie of Rosehaugh (1636/38-1691), Scottish lawyer and essayist, his Laws and Customs of Scotland in Matters Criminal was the first systematic and detailed exposition of Scots criminal law. To begin what would be a prestigious and influential career, Mackenzie assisted in the Midlothian Trials for witchcraft in 1661, providing defence for one of the alleged. Later, during his tenure as Lord Advocate, Mackenzie became the minister responsible for the persecuting policy of Charles II against the Presbyterian Covenanters, thereby being held accountable for the deaths of hundreds due to maltreatment following the Battle of Bothwell Bridge - thus earning him the monicker of 'Bluidy Mackenzie'.

The tenth article is devoted entirely to the identification and punishment of practitioners of witchcraft, including determining 'whether a witch can cause any person be possess', whether transformation be possible', 'whether they can procure love by their potions', and 'whether Witches may kill by their looks'.

Edinburgh. Printed for D. Webster, 1818.

8vo. [4], 112, 52pp. Later gilt-tooled red half-morocco, marbled boards. Rubbed, spine dulled. Marbled endpapers, very occasional light spotting, book-label of Dr. Charles Waterhouse to REP.

A Regency reprint of two tracts, originally published in 1711 and 1704 respectively, concerning the Jacobitism in the late seventeenth-century. The first is a memoir of Jacobite army officer John Graham, Viscount Dundee (1648-1689), known primarily for his bloody suppression of the Presbyterian Covenanters in Scotland and his leadership of the Jacobite uprising of 1689. The biography has been doubtfully attributed to Charles Leslie, likely due to his authorship of Gallienus redivivus, or, Murthere will out, which here appends Dundee's life. The second pamphlet, commonly attributed to journalist and pamphleteer George Ridpath (d. 1726), provides a succinct account of the Massacre of Glencoe - the slaughter in 1692 of members of the MacDonald clan of Glencoe for failing to promptly abandoned their allegiance to James II and pledge oaths of fealty to William III.

8vo. [4], xxii, 312pp. With a half-title. Contemporary calf-backed marbled paper boards, contrasting red morocco lettering-piece. Extremities worn, joints split. Occasional marginal ink-spotting. From the recently dispersed library (by descent) of George Cranstoun, Lord Corehouse (1770-1850), Scottish jurist, satirist and friend of Walter Scott and Lord Monboddo, with his armorial bookplate to FEP.

The expanded edition of Scottish jurist John Millar's (1735-1801) pioneering attempt at a historical sociology of social authority, covering, familial relations, class distinction, the history and condition of women, and political and martial leadership. The final chapter 'Of the condition of servants in different parts of the world' demonstrates both Millar's support of the American cause and his opposition towards slavery. First published in 1771, the work influenced the developing field of anthropological studies and historical jurisprudence.

Folio. Disbound. Stab-stitch holes to gutters, long tear to second mentioned document - touching text without loss of sense.

Three apparently unrecorded documents relating to the dispute between Edinburgh-based surgeon and apothecary John Monro (bap. 1670, d. 1740) and Janet Nisbet of Glasgow regarding the death of her brother John Nisbet, a lieutenant in Colonel Moncrieff's regiment. Nisbet died in 1693 whilst his regiment was stationed in Glasgow, Janet was duly confirmed executrix creditrix, before the Commissary of Glasgow, whilst Monro was named executor creditor by the Commissaries of Edinburgh. Thus, a debate arose as to which city should process John Nisbet's testament. Monro argued, against to protestations of Janet Nisbet, that her brother could not have been considered a resident of Glasgow as he had only been stationed there for fewer forty days and had no fixed domicile. The Court of Session ultimately found in Monro's favour.

CRANSTOUN OF COREHOUSE'S COPY

60) PARKER, John. Notes on the law of arbitration in scotland.
Edinburgh. John Anderson, Jun., 1830. Second edition.

8vo. xxxiv, 341pp, [1]. Uncut and unopened in original publisher's two-tone paper board, printed paper lettering-piece to spine. A trifle rubbed and marked. Internally clean and crisp. From the recently dispersed family library (by descent) of George Cranstoun, Lord Corehouse (1770-1850), Scottish jurist, satirist and friend of Walter Scott and Lord Monboddo, with his armorial bookplate to FEP.

The second edition, in original state, of Principal Extractor in the Court of Session John Parker's authoritative survey concerning arbitration agreements in Scotland from the early seventeenth-century up to 1828. The first edition is apparently unrecorded. Bell and Bradfute issued a 'second', enlarged edition in 1845.

CLEARED OF MARITICIDE

61) [POISONING]. Trial of miss madeleine h. smith, before the high court of justiciary, edinburgh, june 30th to july 9th, 1857, for the alleged poisoning of m. pierre emile l'angelier, at glasgow.

Edinburgh. D. Mathers, 1857. Twentieth thousand.

8vo. iv, [1], 4-126pp. With two plates. Original publisher's brown cloth. Rubbed and marked, spine dulled. Later newspaper clippings relating to the trial pasted to front endpapers, pencil sketch to RFEF, a trifle dusty.

A contemporary account of the trial of Madeleine Hamilton Smith (1835/6-1928), a Glasgow socialite accused of the murder of her former lover Pierre Emile L'Angelier through the use of arsenic. Smith was ably defended by John Inglis who contended that L'Angelier had either destroyed himself deliberately (citing his suicidal tendencies) or accidentally, as he was a hypochondriac with a tendency to incautious self-medication. Ultimately the circumstantial evidence proved tenuous, and the jury returned a majority verdict of not guilty. In later life Smith married George Young Wardle (1836-1910), foreman-manager of William Morris. She is the subject of Emma Robinson's novel Madeleine Graham (1864).

62) [POISONING]. The great glasgow poison mystery.
[London]. [Felix McGlennon], [between 1920 and 1930?]

8vo. 8pp. Original publisher's pictorial wrappers. Leaves browned, some chipping to margins.

A tawdry account, produced for popular consumption, of the trial in 1857 of Madeleine Hamilton Smith (1835/6-1928), a Glasgow socialite accused of the murder of her former lover Pierre Emile L'Angelier through the use of arsenic, issued by Felix McGlennon as the third number in his 'City Garden' series.

66) ROBERTSON, Charles. Report of the auchterarder case, the earl of kinnoull, and the rev. r. young, against the presbytery of auchterarder. Edinburgh. Adam and Charles Black, 1838. First edition.

8vo. In two volumes. [4], 408, 36[4], 451, [1], 16pp. With tipped-in errata slips. Uncut and unopened in original publisher's cloth-backed buff paper boards. A trifle rubbed and marked, spines sunned. From the recently dispersed library (by descent) of George Cranstoun, Lord Corehouse (1770-1850), Scottish jurist, satirist and friend of Walter Scott and Lord Monboddo, with his armorial bookplate to FEP. Presentation copy, inked inscription to recto of Vol. I FFEP: 'With Mr. Charles Robertson's Compts.'

The sole edition, in original state, of an extensive and authoritative survey of the Auchterarder case, a legal dispute that proved to be the first in a series of events that ultimately led to the 1843 schism in the Church of Scotland. In 1834, following the recent passing of the Veto Act, the parishioners of Auchterarder unanimously voted to reject their patron's nomination of a new minister, Robert Young, and the Presbytery duly refused to proceed with his ordination and induction. Young appealed to the Court of Session which, in 1838, concluded that in passing the Veto Act the Church had acted ultra vires, and infringed the statutory rights of patrons. A supplement was issued in 1839.

A KILMORY INVENTORY

69) [SILVER PLATE]. [A manuscript inventory of the silver and gold plate at the estate of the Campbell-Orde baronets].
[s.i.]. [s.n.], [1885-86].

Quarto. [45] leaves, 23 used, the remainder blank. Later limp black cloth. Extremities worn. Internally clean and crisp. Armorial bookplates of Peter Campbell and Charles William Orde loosely inserted.

A late eighteenth-century manuscript inventory, in a single legible hand, recording the silver plate, gold plate, and china at the estate of the Campbell-Orde baronets, Kilmory House, Argyll. The majority of the plate is registered by the chest in which it was housed, one marked as the property of Royal Navy officer Admiral Sir John Orde (1751-1824), another as belonging to the second baronet, Sir John Powlett Orde (1803-1878), who following the death of both his wife and father-in-law inherited Kilmory. Orde rebuilt the house in a Gothic style to a design by architect Joseph Gordon Davis, and remodelled the grounds with the aid of William Jackson Hooker. He was succeeded by his son Sir John William Powlett Orde (1827-1897) who, in 1880, obtained Royal Licence to assume the surname of Campbell-Orde. Kilmory is now the headquarters of Argyll and Bute Council.

ADVOCATING THE LORD'S PRAYER

70) SMART, William. A short discourse (After sermon) Recommending the Service and Prayers of the Church; Delivered in a Meeting-House in Edinburgh, September 28th. 1712...
Edinburgh. Printed by James Watson, 1712. First edition.

Quarto. 12pp. Bound by Maclehose of Glasgow, nineteenth century calf-backed marbled board, lettered in gilt to spine. Rubbed. Book-label of J. R. P. Forrest to FEP, head of text-block shaved (with loss to running-title at times), loss to title page (without loss of sense), paper repairs to verso of title and fore-edge of the majority of leaves.

A rare survival, albeit somewhat care-worn, of the sole edition of Church of Scotland clergyman William Smart's (c. 1649-1715) short paper, read before the congregation of an Edinburgh meeting house in 1712, advocating for Lord's Prayer to remain a part of the liturgy.

ESTC records copies at two locations in the British Isles (BL and NLS), and two further in North America (Huntington and Monash).

71) [SPORTSMAN'S RECORD]. The improved sportsman's record. Edinburgh and London. George Waterston & Sons, [1881].

Oblong folio. [72]pp. Printed in columns. Original publisher's printed buff wrappers. Extremities Rubbed, creased, and marked. Title page detached. Manuscript entries, in numerous hands, to Initial nineteen pages.

The record book of shooting parties held at numerous Argyllshire grounds, including Kilmory, estate of the Campbell-Orde baronets - from the recently dispersed papers of this estate.

The entries are not sequential, commencing with dates in August 1881, then leaping forward to the final months of 1901 and running intermittently through to the close of 1904. Each entry records the names of the participants (often including Sir Arthur John Campbell-Orde, fourth Baronet (1865-1933)), the number of guns or rods used, and the totals of fish or game taken - ranging from grouse, to rabbit, to trout.

Natural History

Aberdeen 1793

An explanation of the Signs.

Before we begin Natural History, it will be proper to mention, that the Celestic is a circle which is placed obliquely in the Sphere; & is so called because eclipses happen therein. The Sun makes his annual progress through this circle, & is never found out of it; The Zodiac encircles this Sphere like a belt, & lies on each side of the Celestic to the extent of 16 Degrees.

1. The Equator divides the Zodiac into two equal parts, the one North & the other South.

Antiquates Ltd was established by Tom Lintern-Mole in 2007; we travel far and wide to buy, sell, and advise on rare books and manuscripts.

Concentrating on hand-press printing and early modern manuscripts, we pride ourselves on offering a varied selection of antiquarian works on a diverse range of subjects, leaning towards the interesting, the important, and the unusual.

We have a countryside bookshop in Wareham; we also regularly issue catalogues - do ask if you would like to be added to our mailing list - and frequently exhibit at regional and national book fairs in London, Bristol, Cambridge, Edinburgh, Oxford, and York.

We also offer a valuation service (for either insurance or probate purposes), as well as advice on library development.
